Imagine This...

by Lisa Baird, Board of Governors President

After the club-wide vote.....along with the recommendations of the Wish List Committee, the first item on the Cap Fund list is the leveling of the tee boxes and adding drainage to the greens. The Sports Grill renovation is also on the list. There will also be a TV added to the tennis deck. None of these items will be completed next week but will be ongoing for the next year. Stay tuned as we will keep you updated on the progress.

The pool is open! Along with the pool being open, Mulligan's is also open. It's very handy to stop after 9 holes to grab a bite to eat and something to drink before making the turn.

Just a reminder that you must have a driver's license in order to be able to drive a golf cart on the golf course at Eldorado. I've also seen kids riding their bikes along the cart paths. It's up to the parents to make sure that your kids aren't the ones who are doing this.

Our membership continues to grow. We are very close to becoming a "full with a wait list" club. I have heard grumblings that we have too many members, and because we have too many members, the service is lacking. You need to keep in mind we have added over 200 new members in the last year. The club is definitely going through a transition. Jayson, Scott and the staff are working very hard to accommodate us. And I think you'll agree with me that sometimes we can all be high maintenance (some more than others). So please be patient. We want this to be a club that you can be proud to belong to.

See you at the club!

Ambassador News

by Rob and Jennifer Spring

Summer is here! Our favorite time of year at the club. The kids are almost out of school (I know our boy can't wait)....be on the look out for camps and special events for the whole family! May's Martini's was the last Thursday so it didn't make the newsletter but I'm sure it is was great.

This month's Ambassador Spotlight is on Patrick and Jeannette Grazioli. They are 2 term Ambassadors since joining the Club in 2009. The Grazioli's love the club, but golf and socializing are their favorite. Pat plays when he can, he has a pretty tight schedule as the Managing Director of the America's for EMC Managed Services. Jeannette is Super-Mom, volunteering on countless committees and school programs, she coordinates "GGG" (Girls Giggles and Golf) on Thursday evenings and is part of the EWGA.

Their favorite menu items are the nachos and vodka (Pat's more of a Heineken guy). When asked what their favorite special event was they said "Martini's of course".

They have 2 children; Gabriella 7 and William 4. Gabby has taken up golf this year and recently made her first BIRDIE on number 8, Congrats Gabby! Will spends most of his time cruising for chicks while hanging at the club.

Pat and Jeannette, thank you very much for being a part of Eldorado and serving on the 2011 Ambassador Club.

Cheers, Rob and Jennifer Spring

To tree, or not to tree

Presented by the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America

Have you ever wondered why golf course superintendents have what seem to be perfectly healthy trees removed at the course you play?

To the golfer, the biggest hazards on the golf course are bunkers, ponds, creeks and gullies. To the golf course superintendent, the biggest hazards on the golf course can be trees.

Golf course superintendents closely monitor the health of trees because they do enhance the environment and are an integral part of the golf course. Trees filter dust, lower temperatures by creating shade and provide wildlife habitat.

But the first responsibility for any superintendent is to provide a high-quality playing surface based on the available resources. Unfortunately, trees compete with turf for the basic nutrients needed to flourish – oxygen, water and sunlight. This battle is waged most often near putting greens and tees where trees often form an amphitheatre-like setting. As the trees encroach the closely cropped turf on the putting and teeing surfaces, they restrict airflow and sunlight while using up the available nutrients. To compensate, fans will be placed in these areas to aid air circulation, but sometimes that tactic is but a short-term solution.

Perhaps unlike any sport, golfers have a special affection for their playing surface. Golfers talk about golf courses with a reverence that should be reserved for a temple or shrine. Rare is there such admiration expressed for a tennis court, a soccer field or a basketball court. Because of their affinity for the golf course, golfers often cringe at the prospects of having trees trimmed or removed. Whatever the reason, tree maintenance is not as easy as pulling the chainsaw cord. The most important part of a tree maintenance program may be communicating the reasons why such action is necessary.

Turf health is one issue and human health is another. Tree maintenance programs are important to reduce the risk of falling limbs that could potentially harm golfers. As a means to reduce their liability, some golf facilities have communicated and have enacted well-defined policies regarding tree risk reduction policies. In addition to turf quality and safety, the strategy of play is frequently determined by trees. Golf course architects use trees to define boundaries such as separating fairways, creating doglegs, providing for depth perception and making challenges by blocking a certain angle of entry.

Superintendents must take into account how the course was intended to play before tree modifications or plantings are enacted. Often times the golf course designer is long gone after a course has matured and grown. Trees that did not affect the strategy based on the original layout mature and create shot making that is contrary to the original intent.

Despite the emotional attachment to trees, a well-planned and executed tree maintenance program often gains quick acceptance, even among the most ardent foes. Under the direction of the golf course superintendent and assisted by a golf course architect and skillful arborist, tree maintenance can be executed with the results being barely noticeable to even the keenest eye. In the end, all benefit as turf quality improves, safety is enhanced and the course plays in the manner in which it was intended.

For more information regarding golf course management practices, contact your local superintendent or the GCSAA at 800-472-7878 or www.gcsaa.org.
